September and half of October was a time of acclimation; learning the new culture, my new quartier (neighborhood), adjusting to everything; pace, time zone, language, etc. I helped make books and some decorations for the preschool, and settled into my new home. I'm getting my daily exercise in by living on the fifth floor.

One mode of transportation; the Horse and cart.

We had a visiting missionary in October who came to teach Christian Living to the Bible School group. We went to a Wednesday Bible Study at a home outside of Dakar city limits and was able to go to another home where they have church. It was an amazing experience to join in worship with them.

Then, because two of the missionaries are Canadian, we celebrated the Canadian Thanksgiving together and enjoyed playing games and fellowship. It was a lovely time.

In mid October I received a call asking if I could go to another country and assist the missionary who had broken their foot. After receiving permission from my supervisor, I left for another country in late October and stayed four weeks until just before Thanksgiving. While there, I assisted the missionary in packing up their apartment, helped them move into their new home and unpacked everything. I helped with the daily chores and enjoyed the fellowship at the end of the day with laughter and games. One Sunday the church body came to the house and we worshiped God together.

Returning to Senegal, I celebrated Thanksgiving with the Sullys, joined expats at a social softball game (helping the scorekeeper and getting to know others) and prepared for the National Conference being held the second weekend of December. After the conference we had a Christmas program, celebrated Christmas, had a Ladies party where we painted a canvas with the theme for 2025 that we are a Light of Jesus in this world, and ended the year with a New Year's Eve watch night service.
